

Maureen Metcalf

421 West State Street, Columbus, Ohio 43215

Maureen Metcalf is a highly respected executive advisor, visionary founder, and Chief Executive Officer of the Innovative Leadership Institute. Committed to creating a better world by elevating leadership and evolving organizations globally, Maureen and her consulting team guide clients through structured envisioning of their organizations' future, elevating leadership effectiveness, and evolving organizations' performance to amplify their impact and build thriving organizations.

Recognized as a Fellow of the esteemed International Leadership Association, Maureen is also an accomplished author. Her international award-winning eleven-book series on innovative leadership includes the most recent book, Innovative Leadership & Followership in the Age of AI.

Beyond her writing achievements, Maureen extends her influence through her captivating international podcast, "Innovating Leadership: Co-creating our Future," ranked in the top 1% of podcasts globally. As the host, she leads engaging discussions on cutting-edge leadership practices, including an extensive AI library, garnering a broad and appreciative audience.

Maureen's expertise is highly sought after in leadership, as evidenced by her regular contributions as a writer and expert contributor to Forbes.com. Her esteemed Forbes Coaches Council membership further solidifies her role as a trusted authority in the field.

With a passion for education, Maureen shares her knowledge with students across various universities as an esteemed educator. She serves as the Chair of James Madison University's School of Strategic Leadership Studies Advisory Board and a member of Franklin University's Mason Leadership Center's Advisory Board, demonstrating her commitment to advancing the study and practice of strategic leadership, where she earned an honorary Doctorate.